Equality, Diversity, Cohesion and Integration Screening

Directorate: Adult Social Care

As a public authority we need to ensure that all our strategies, policies, service and functions, both current and proposed have given proper consideration to equality, diversity, cohesion and integration.

A screening process can help judge relevance and provides a record of both the process and decision. Screening should be a short, sharp exercise that determines relevance for all new and revised strategies, policies, services and functions. Completed at the earliest opportunity it will help to determine:

- the relevance of proposals and decisions to equality, diversity, cohesion and integration.
- whether or not equality, diversity, cohesion and integration is being/has already been considered, and

Service area: Commissioning

• whether or not it is necessary to carry out an impact assessment.

4. Considering the impact on equality, diversity, cohesion and integration

If you can demonstrate you have considered how your proposals impact on equality, diversity, cohesion and integration you have carried out an impact assessment.

Please provide specific details for all three areas below (use the prompts for guidance).

How have you considered equality, diversity, cohesion and integration? (Think about the scope of the proposal, who is likely to be affected, equality related information, gaps in information and plans to address, consultation and engagement activities - taken place or planned, with those likely to be affected)

The service specification was developed as a result of the consultation with key stakeholders (including service users, patients, carers and different communities in Leeds). It identifies how Healthwatch Leeds will be representative of the different communities of Leeds and accessible to all citizens, including children and young people. Meeting the access requirements of people and communities is a strong theme in the service specification, including communication.

Local Healthwatch is subject to the requirements of the Equality Act 2010 as is it is a statutory body.

Engagement has taken place with a broad range of Stakeholders including the general public and various targeted communities ensuring they had an opportunity to share their opinions, this included carers, older people, people with a physical disability, people with mental health problems, people with learning disabilities, different Asian communities (including Bangladeshi women, Blind Asians, South Asian Elders), Gypsies and Travellers, the Chinese community and the Irish community.

Additional consultation events for the deaf community and equality and diversity groups/communities also took place.

The requirements of Healthwatch Leeds are set out in the Health and Social Care Act and subsequent regulations. This includes the requirement to be representative of their local area.

The service specification and contracts Terms and Conditions identify and stipulate the need for accessible services that are open to all people of Leeds who are entitled to access health and social care services. Healthwatch Leeds is required to provide a service appropriate to people's needs and not to discriminate on the grounds of their protected characteristic or responsibility for dependents, in terms of either participation or of obtaining and presenting people's views and experiences.

Healthwatch Leeds is required to carry out its functions in an inclusive way, championing diversity so that it can be an enabler of service user and carer involvement and service improvement on behalf of the whole community, particularly those whose voice might not be otherwise heard.

Healthwatch Leeds is required to report to the Council on its performance against the contract by the fulfilment of key performance indicators, including equality indicators.

Key findings

(Think about any potential positive and negative impact on different equality characteristics, potential to promote strong and positive relationships between groups, potential to bring groups/communities into increased contact with each other, perception that the proposal could benefit one group at the expense of another).

The service specification was created after consultation with key stakeholders that included the general public, service users, carers and patients as well as communities, Third Sector organisations and health and social care commissioners and providers.

Working with and including communities in the delivery of its services is a key element of the service specification. A positive impact on communities as a result of Healthwatch Leeds is expected, enabling and empowering communities to be involved with health and social care commissioners and providers so that they influence services to meet their needs. People and communities are able to obtain accessible information about health and social care services, information pertaining to their rights to services and how they can access them; thereby enabling people to have more choice and control about their services available to them.

Through partnership working and working in an inclusive way, Healthwatch Leeds aims to support communities to work cohesively together on health and social care issues.

A range of volunteering opportunities, available through Healthwatch Leeds, enables individuals to attain a volunteering certificate to assist them in future employment endeavours.

Actions

(Think about how you will promote positive impact and remove/reduce negative impact)

Part of Healthwatch Leeds remit is to promote the positive impact the service is having on health and social care services, and on partnership working/working with communities as part of its communication plan. This plan is published and available to the people and communities of Leeds to encourage more people and communities to work with Healthwatch Leeds.

Leeds City Council monitors Healthwatch Leeds against the expected outcomes, as per the service specification, and promotes its work.

Healthwatch Leeds is also monitored in relation to the people and communities that it works with – it is important that the work and decisions that Healthwatch Leeds undertakes reflects the diverse communities of Leeds and not a minority group of people or individuals.
