Spoons is opening a pub in Headingley and we are so here for it

A new addition to the Otley Run?

Matt Livingstone

Wetherspoons have received permission to open a new pub on Headingley Lane, halfway between The Original Oak and Hyde Park Book Club.

We've been crying out for a spoons in Headingley for ages, and it seems like our prayers have finally been answered.

Spoons bought the building, which used to be an old Girls High School, four years ago, but boring residents postponed any plans with complaints. But now, the new Spoons has finally got the go ahead, and we can't wait to make it our new local for post-uni drinks.

We've always got time for a pitcher or seven

There's no official opening date yet, but we'll keep you in the loop with any developments because arguably this is the most important change happening in the whole of the city.

Life LEEDS

We are the voice of students.

The Tab is a site covering youth culture and student culture, run by journalists who like being first.

We livestream from protests, expose bullshit and discrimination and tell you which kebab shops are worth your money. Our London office is run by 23-year-olds, who write seriously hot takes, sickeningly accurate guides to life, and chat to Jeremy Corbyn about Love Island.

The Tab Network – our guerilla army of bold and subversive student reporters across the country – breaks stories like this lovely young man who burned a £20 note in front of a homeless man

We were founded by three students at Cambridge in 2009 as a reaction to outoftouch student papers.

Since then, The Tab has exploded into one of the biggest youth media sites in Britain. That's why our writers get offered the best jobs in the media. If they're not snapped up by us, you'll find Tab grads at

VICE, the BBC, Reuters, Bloomberg, Vogue, BuzzFeed, The Times, ITV, The Guardian, The Independent, Dazed, HuffPost, Business Insider, Mashable and The Financial Times.
