“This Council notes the decision to stop publishing 3rd party public representations on Public Access from 6 June is for an initial six-month trial period, while still enabling members of the public to comment on planning applications.

Council notes the trial is due to an increase in vociferous public comments on the platform discouraging some residents from commenting on planning applications due to fear of repercussions. Council is concerned by reports the platform has received antagonistic correspondence between applicants and objectors, meaning planning officers had to spend time redacting, publishing and responding to complaints on Public Access rather than assessing planning applications.

Council believes its record over many years shows it values high quality, transparent consultation as a method to engage with the people of Leeds. Recent examples of consultation exercises contributing significantly to key policy development include but are not limited to:

- The Children and Young People’s Plan Refresh which captured the voices of 80,000 children and young people,
- The Health and Wellbeing Strategy Refresh which took into account the Big Leeds Chat , an innovative approach to consultation which involved 43 in-person discussion forums open to all people take place with both geographical communities, communities of interest and young people organisations.
- The Council’s climate change plans, developed through the Big Leeds Climate Conversation with input from close to 8000 Leeds residents.
- The Connecting Leeds Transport Strategy which was developed with input from over 4,500 contributions.
- The Leeds Local Plan 2040 which is being developed with input from over 1000 contributions

Council notes planning services at councils across the country have been negatively impacted by 13 years of failed Conservative Government austerity, meaning an increasing number of councils have been forced to cut back on non-statutory responsibilities, such as the publication of 3rd party public representations on planning applications.

Council further notes the results of the trial will be examined by the relevant Scrutiny Board to see what impact the change has had on public engagement in the planning process and Council confirms its commitment to implementing the outcome of the trial process.”

A Hayden
